It is these people then, who know the real worth of the Red Cross—the desperately poor mother of a dead veteran who, facing further debt with a seriously ill husband, recovered her son's $5000 life insurance policy through Red Cross aid, although she herself had believed the policy lapsed and worthless—a child at play, alive only because the blood coursing through his veins is that of another—a family whose earthly possessions were consumed by fire but who were fed, clothed, and sheltered through Red Cross help—the hospital patient whose life is brightened by the tender ministrations of a Nurse's Aide and the compassion of a Gray Lady-all these and thousands of others know the Red Cross for what it is.

It is an affair of the heart, the work done by the Red Cross, for figures in themselves are cold, telling nothing of the tragedies, and heartbreaks involved in them. That is why, when the Red Cross opens its annual campaign on March 1st, it behooves each of us to search our hearts and give, that in so doing we may make the work of this great organization possible.

RED CROSS SUNDAY

Sunday, February 25, churches in Warren county will observe the nation-wide Red Cross Sabbath.

It is fitting that they do so. No other organization is so closely associated with mercy. No other organization more eloquently expresses the true brotherhood of man. The Red Cross knows no boundaries of faith, creed or race. You can be proud of your Red Cross and it is your Red Cross.

The congress has given the American Red Cross to the American people—it is yours to be proud of, and to help support. In these perilous days your Red Cross is being called upon to give increased aid and succor to those in need. It is vital to the nation's defense program.

In the face of these greater demands, it is necessary that you do your part in seeing that the Red Cross has the wherewithal to carry on at full speed ahead for all humanity.

When you go to church on Sunday, remember your Red Cross needs both your prayers and your dollars.

WHISTLE HAS BLOWN

If you saw the pictures of those New York basketball players who took bribes to "fix" games, you must have had a feeling of heart-sickness.

Senator Kefauver, head of a senate crime investigating committee, says New York is not a special case, that rigged basketball games are being reported in other sectors. But every decent American, every father and mother of a healthy boy who is or might be an athlete, must hope the practice is not Commercialization of sport must take a good deal of the blame for these scandals. When you virtually professionalize a game, it shouldn't be too great a surprise to find some of the youthful contenders responsive to the money lure.

Apparently a fair share of our youngsters feel too heavy a strain on their moral fiber when this lure is steadily put before them. First, we'd better remove the attraction. Then we can think about our failure to make more of our young men resistant to this sort of thing.

So far as personal injuries or loss of life were concerned, the Pennsylvania Railroad had another of those fortunate accidents last evening when eleven loaded coal cars jumped the track directly in front of the depot on the west side. Although at least two employes were in the path of one of the cars headed for the station, they succeded in scurrying to safety.

THE CROSS AND THE WILL OF GOD

Text: For I decided to know nothing among you except Jesus Christ and Him crucified. I Cor. 2:2.

To the great missionary, St. Paul, the cross was the very heart of the Gospel. As far as we have any record, the apostles and the early Christians never went out to Calvary to even look at the cross on which the Savior had died. When they spoke of the cross they always had something greater and higher in mind wen just the wooden cross, the instrument of suffering and

To them the cross always stood for the highest revelation of Divine Love. True, it revealed the awfulness and hideous nature of sin, but it also stood for God's plan of redemption and salvation. It was to them the source of Life, Hope, Joy and Blessing.

Paul did not always believe in the cross. Coming near Damascus he met the living and all glorious Christ. This experience changed him into the greatest preacher of the Gospel of the

Jesus Christ met His cross as a result of His undivided loyalty to the will of His Heavenly Father. He came into the world, not to do His own will, but the will of Him who sent Him. The first word spoken by Christ recorded in the New Testament was: 'Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business', and when He was facing His cross He prayed 'If it be possible, let this cup pass from Me, nevertheless not as I wilt, but as Thou wilt.' In this harmony with the will of God, there is always strength, security and peace.

We marvel at the greatness of the personality of Christ, when we see how completely He trusted the cross and the way of the cross. In this He stood alone. His friends feared the cross and His enemies were sure that the cross would end His power and influence. Triumphantly the Savior exclaimed: 'And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, I will draw all men unto me.' Christian history has verified these words of Jesus through the cen-

Labor's Walkout Threatens Whole Mobilization Effort

BY PETER EDSON NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—Walkout of union labor representatives from the Wage Stabilization Board presents the Truman administration with a darn sight more serious crisis than the debate in Congress over limitation on troops to Europe.

The long statement of the United Labor Policy Committee is a direct threat to the whole home-front mobilization and stabilization effort. This statement purported to be a criticism of government policies on wages, prices, rent controls, taxes, manpower and small business. It was also a blast against Defense Mobilization Director C. E. Wilson and his so-called big-business associates who are at the head of the preparedness program.

Mr. Wilson's office let it be known there would be no immediate comment after the Labor Policy group's statement was issued. Economic Stabilization Administrator Eric Johnston's office let it be known he would have no comment over the weekend. This was to give everyone concerned a chance to cool off.

WHETHER or not the walkout of the three labor members of the Wage Stabilization Board is a temporary spite spat or the warning of a complete divorce remains to be seen. The three labor members are, or were, Harry C. Bates of the Bricklayers, Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers, Elmer Walker of the Machinists. They walked out in protest against the 10 per cent plus fringe wage increase

If they don't go back, the administration can try to find other labor representatives to sit with the three business and the three public representatives. Or, the President may try to run wage stabilization with public representatives only. That, however, would require an amendment to the Defense Production Act.

What public reaction will be to this latest breakdown in the stabilization program is uncertain. There are two possibilities. One is that the walkout of the labor representatives will be regarded as a strike. It is defiance of government.

Regardless of the merits of the union leaders' grievances, this refusal to cooperate on the government's stabilization program could backfire against all organized labor. The situation is comparable to what happened when the railroad yardmen played sick.

The wage stabilization formula worked out by the public members of WSB-Chairman Cyrus Ching, Clark Kerr of University of California and John T. Dunlop of Harvard-seemed to offer reasonable room for collective bargaining. Wage increases and cost of living increases would have been allowed up to the best increases obtained by the most favored unions-the coal miners and the auto workers. This formula was agreed to by the employers' representatives-J. Ward Keener of B. F. Goodrich, Henry Arthur of Swift and Co., Reuben Robertson of Champion Paper Co.

AS a wage "freeze" structure, this formula was most certainly built of rubber ice. Yet the representatives of organized labor decided they couldn't accept it. Like the farmers who are protected by their parity formula and the employers who are protected by profit percentage margins, the union leaders felt they had to have their own sliding scale escapes from controls against inflation. Selfish interest came to the fore. National welfare and general public interest be

In one sense, this walkout of the union leaders probably gives the Communists just as much cheer as, say Senator Wherry's opposition to sending U.S. troop reinforcements to Europe. It is a demonstration of disunity at home which gives aid and comfort to the enemy abroad.

The other side of this argument is that the union labor leaders, epresenting some 16 million members, feel that they have been slighted in defense planning.

waterpower for 31 per cent of the total kilowatt hours produced in the United States. Coal generated 46.6 per cent of the combined total. The process by which this major source of energy becomes electric power is shown in the pictograph Coal is conveyed to the power plant bunkers, is then fed under controlled conditions into several types of burning equipment which turns the coal into heat. This heat is absorbed into water which is contained in the large boilers made up of small tubes and large drums, turning the water into steam. The steam is then released—at enormous pressure—against the blades of a turbine, which drives an electric generator. It is the generator that converts mechanical energy into electrical energy. Last year, 90,000,000 tons of bituminous coal were consumed by electric utilities. It was converted into 150 billion kilowatt hours, enough at present rate of consumption to provide the entire State of New York, with its 13 million population and vast industries, with all the electricity it needs over a period of six years. Bowling Champions

The outstanding bowling records and achievements of Andy Varipapa, one of the country's foremost bowlers . . . Ned Day, Jos Falcaro, World's undefeated Match Game Bowling Champion . .

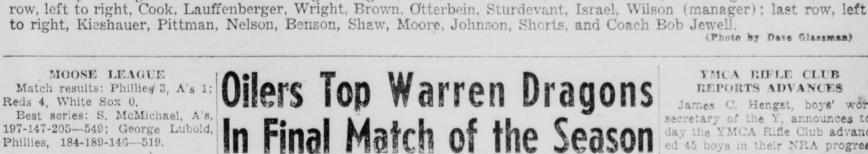

Jimmy Smith, former All-

Events Champlon . . . Eddie Funaro, Duck-Pin high score (239) record holder, just to mention a few names of bowling "greats" who have helped to make bowling one of the fastest growing and most popular of sporting games in America today.

There are about 25,000 bowling establishments in operation throughout the country, accomodating more than 15 million bowlers annually.

Bowling history dates back some 1,500 years to northern Italy where the game was played out of doors with a smooth round boulder (called bowles) used as a ball. The game originally played with only nine pins, was outlawed in America at one time because crooked gamblers controlled it. Then the gamblers, in order to evade the law added one pin, making it a "10-pin" game and changing the set-up from a diamond shape to our present day triangular shape.

We have an outstanding record too, here at Carlson's Service Stores when it comes to automobile repair and service. Each one of our mechanics is an expert in his field . . . we offer all car repairs both inside and out and top to bottom. You will find our prices exceptionally low for such high quality work. RALPH G. ECKERT

Hello, Folks. This last week has certainly started a lot of people thinking about getting out and making that last checkup on plows, harrows, discs and other equipment that will be first to see service when the balmy days of

These rainy days we have been having lately reminded me of an article I read recently about the effect of raindrops on erosion. It should make everyone of us think a lot more about controlling ero sion, especially when we see the muddy water running off of our fields and in the streams. But more of that a little later.

Charles Camp, Cole Hill potato grower, completed his conservation plan this week. He has been busy this last month clearing trees and brush from a level piece of ground to even up a field for potatoes. The product of this clearing is going to one of the pulp mills at Erie. Charles big problem is wet ground but he has the right answer for it. He is going to improve his pasture, increase the amount of perennial hay and hay type pasture and use grass silage for his dairy and beef stock. This plan enables him to rotate his best land for potato growing, putting the wet land to its best use in producing pasture and hay, and the steep areas are going to grow trees that will be harvested by his sons when they follow in their

Norman Haner, young veteran Stillson Hall farmer, also completed his farm plan this week. Norman plans to swing into complete grassland farming. His new silo is being reinforced to hold grass silage. He is going to seed alfalfa and brome grass on the better drained soils while two mixtures will be used on the wet areas, one Ladino and orchard grass and two Birdsfoot trifoil and timothy, these last two mixtures can be used as hay, silage, pasture or any combination he desires to use.

Last week I mentioned practices that controlled water on and in the ground. Have you ever thought about any control of the water as it hits the surface? Control at this point is probably more important than any other place for as each falling raindrop hits the bare ground it splashes into the air carrying with it many small particles of soil. Many of these raindrop explosions occur over the entire field causing a layer of erosion to take place. The effect of noticed at the top of slopes where the subsoil is exposed over a large area. As these raindrops and particles of soil work down hill they collect into definite drainage channels and then a process known to all as gully erosion takes place.

Some practices recommended by the Warren district to help control these raindrop explosions on bare soil are cover crops and permanent vegetation. As soon as row crops such as corn, potatoes, etc., are harvested a temporary vegetative cover should be grown until the next crop is planted.

Since a large portion of this loss occurs during the winter as the ground lays bare it would be well if we seriously considered the use, where possible, of cover crops and permanent vegetation to help control erosion losses and conserve our remaining farmland.

See you all next week.
